

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A headrest for a vehicle seat includes a stationary support part, and an impact element which can be moved relative to the latter. The impact element is mounted on the support part via a lever system which can be at least partially decoupled, so that it permits different sequences of movement between impact element and the support part.